

APPLICATION AND ADMISSION

Applicants need an undergraduate degree from an accredited college or university, in a relevant subject area of humanities or social sciences (History, international relations, politics, European studies, economics and sociology, or modern languages).

Prerequisites for applying for this Master's programme are proficiency in English (level C1 of the Common European Framework of reference for languages, CEFR) and a good knowledge of a second modern language. A command of German (level B2) is required for applicants at Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin.

Application and admission processes are regulated and administered by all participating universities, according to the local practice. Study places are awarded by each of full partner universities. Applicants have to send their application directly to one of the partner universities. For deadlines, please contact the university to which you are applying.

For the period of mobility: All students must apply and register for the programme through their home university. In addition, formal registration and course enrolment is required at those participating university/ies where students attend for at least one semester.

Joint MA programme in European History

THE PROGRAMME

The Joint Master of Arts in European History, founded in 2012, is a stimulating interdisciplinary, comparative Master's programme, offering the choice between 10 partner universities located in 9 major European capitals. The Humboldt-Universität in Berlin is the coordinating university of this programme.

The full-time programme consists of four semesters, during which students have the unique opportunity to study at up to two or three of the programme's partner universities.

In these remarkable settings, students will develop the ability to understand historical problems, learn to identify key historical debates, and present independent conclusions. Students will acquire the knowledge as well as the academic skills and methods to develop, implement and assess their own approaches to solving historiographical problems and questions.

This diverse programme focuses on the comparative analysis of European history. Students will have the chance to investigate the history of Europe, with topics including:

- Social and Economic History of Europe, Urbanisation and Industrialisation
- Cultural History, History of Religions, History of Science
- History of Dictatorships, Violence and Conflicts
- Colonialism and Post-Colonialism
- Imperial Histories and Nation-Building
- Migration, International and Transcultural Relationships

English is the main language of instruction and will be accepted at all partner universities for presentations, assignments and the Master thesis. Proficiency in the country's own language is also required. All partner universities offer modules in English, which are complemented by courses or modules in other languages. Furthermore, the consortium organizes on a regular basis summer schools for students of the programme in which they can meet other students and faculty members of all participating academic Institutions.

The Joint MA in European History is particularly suited for students interested in pursuing careers in international organisations and foundations. They may achieve skills that can be applied to a broad range of careers, e.g. in educational and cultural sectors, as well as in journalism, administration or diplomacy. The programme will help strengthen students' European mobility and knowledge of foreign languages, it will offer them the opportunity to gain intercultural experiences, and it will be an excellent preparation for those wishing to complete a PhD in European history.

STUDY STRUCTURE

The Joint MA in European History is a two year Master's programme divided into four phases (two winter and two summer terms). The programme starts in the winter term and has a modular structure. It is made up of 120 Credit points (ECTS) – 30 ECTS each term.

All students are obliged to study at least at two of the participating universities in different countries. Studies from the partner universities will of course be recognised. In order to obtain a joint degree (Berlin, Dublin) or a double degree (Paris, Rome) students must complete at least 30 ECTS at a full member partner university and the Master's thesis must be supervised by faculty members of the home and of the partner university. For a second period of mobility students can also choose an associated member university.
